

In any case I should like the opportunity of discussing this situation with you at your earliest convenience.

Yours sincerely,

Casablanca, 19th November 1942

Leslie O. Heath

Docteur Edouard Wyss-Dunant,
Dar bel Hamri,
près SIDI SLIMANE.

Dear Dr. Wyss-Dunant,

I am hoping that at your farm all of you are unharmed as result of military activities, and that we may expect to see you here in Casablanca in the near future.

As the Hôtel Majestic was requisitioned by the American Authorities I had to leave, but was very kindly taken in by Mr. & Mme Surleau, 5 rue Savorgnan de Brazza. I also have office space at No. 93 rue Coli, which is quite near the Grand Hôtel where you stopped when you were last at Casablanca.

I should like very much indeed to have the opportunity to discuss the situation of the concentration camps, as the people being there are rather naturally restless now that the Americans have arrived.

On the other hand the people in the camps cannot be released immediately, as Casablanca and the other towns are already so overcrowded there will be no place for these people, nor were there be jobs immediately available for all of them, although I have no doubt that a number of the men from the camps would enlist as volunteers with some of the Allied Armies - but from past experience they would not enlist in the French Foreign Legion. Nevertheless there apparently have been attempts to recruit some of these men for the Foreign Legion, a manoeuvre which, I fear, will cause trouble, and I hope the French Authorities can be persuaded to desist.

On the other hand I have no doubt that the skills of many of the people in the camps can be employed to advantage in civilian units attached to the armies, or that these people can soon find an employment in Moroccan industry.

In any case, I should like the opportunity of discussing this situation with you at your very earliest convenience.

Yours sincerely,

Casablanca, 19th November 1942

Leslie O. Heath.

Docteur Edouard Wysz-Dumont,
Dar bel Hamri,
Casablanca.

Dear Dr. Wysz-Dumont,

I am hoping that at your firm all of you are unharmed as result of military activities, and that we may expect to see you here in Casablanca in the near future.

As the Hôtel Majestic was requisitioned by the American Authorities I had to leave, but was very kindly taken in by Mr. & Mme Surieux, 5 rue Savorgnan de Brazza. I also have office space at No. 23 rue Coiffé, which is quite near the Grand Hôtel where you stopped when you were last at Casablanca.

I should like very much indeed to have the opportunity to discuss the situation of the concentration camps, as the people being there are rather naturally restless now that the Americans have arrived.

On the other hand the people in the camps cannot be released immediately, as Casablanca and the other towns are already so overcrowded there will be no place for these people, nor were there be jobs immediately available for all of them, although I have no doubt that a number of the men from the camps would enlist as volunteers with some of the Allied Armies - but from past experience they would not enlist in the French Foreign Legion. Nevertheless there apparently have been attempts to recruit some of these men for the Foreign Legion, a maneuver which, I fear, will cause trouble, and I hope the French Authorities can be persuaded to desist.

On the other hand I have no doubt that the skills of many of the people in the camps can be employed to advantage in civilian units attached to the armies, or that these people can soon find an employment in Moroccan industry.